Perpetual Art Machine

The Chelsea Art Museum is proud to present the New York museum premiere of Perpetual Art Machine. Originally created in December 2005 as a collaboration and research project by the artists Chris Borkowski, Aaron Miller, Raphaele Shirley and Lee Wells. [PAM] allows the artist and viewer to become a more active participant in the curatorial process and has grown into an important archive and presenter of 21st century video art. As the convergence of new media continues to expand the creative possibilities for the international video artist, [PAM] seeks to facilitate and promote the artists dedicated to the medium through its free community web portal, custom designed interactive installation and special curated programs. Along side of the [PAM] installation that includes over 800 artists the exhibition will be featuring single and multi-channel video projects from 42 of the most innovative artists in the [PAM] community.
